The Next Field of Battle

The Next 16 Months

► Violent Crime: In commitment to moving our State forward and delivering safer neighborhoods for every Maryland family, we've set the new goal of reducing violent crime in Maryland by another 20% by the end of 2018

► Violence Against Women and Children: Because crimes committed against women and children can impact a family for generations, in 2013 the O'Malley Brown Administration set a new goal of reducing violent crime against women and children by 25 percent by the end of 2018,

► Information Sharing: Promote innovation, focus, organization and seamless coordination of multi-agency initiatives to serve as a platform for the constant evolution of public safety strategies in Maryland.

► Homeland Security: Prioritize the 12 core capacities that, when met, would constitute significant progress on improving the safety and security of Marylanders and continue to add important new objectives under these core capacities as new threats emerge.
